WCSR To Install Underground Cable Line To Quadrangel

WCSR, the voice of Smith College, officially five years old last Jan. 6, is the student-owned and operated campus radio station, broadcasting to more than half of the college resident houses from its headquarters on Prospect St.

This fall, for the first time, students in the Quadrangle and other outlying campus houses will be able to tune in 600 on the dial and hear the voices of radio-minded classmates conducting quiz programs, reviewing plays, and reporting on the latest record on the disc jockey turntable.

Plans were made this year to purchase and install an underground cable from the radio station to the Quadrangle area, thus putting the entire Smith student body within reach of the station. The cable will be installed this summer. The money for the project, which will cost almost $2,000, was raised by the students themselves.

Miss Janet White, a junior from New Haven, Conn., is the new general manager of the station.
